Marton Mere local nature reserve

Last Modified August 15, 2018

Marton Mere local nature reserve is a tranquil refuge on the edge of Blackpool. Once the council's rubbish tip is now a biodiversity hot spot.

It's an important location for nature conservation, quiet recreation and environmental education.

The reserve is a recognised as a site of special scientific interest for its bird population.

It also supports many important species such as:

- Dragonflies
- Butterflies
- Bats
- Orchids

The site contains a diversity of habitats including:

- Open water
- Reed beds
- Grassland
- Pockets of woodland and scrub

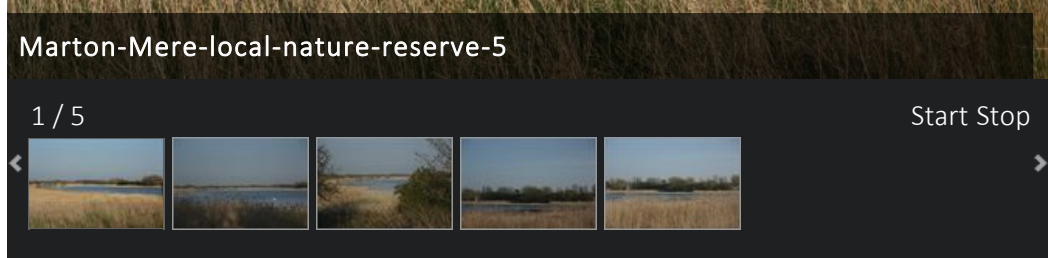

Location

During April to September you can access the site by parking on East Park Drive or Lawson Road and enjoy a scenic walk.

Follow the way marked footpaths to the reserve entrance.
